LIEUT. GOV. WILLARD MAKES ADDRESS.

Opera House Thronged With Friends of the Aspirant-General and Personal.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., August 17, 1905. Lieut, Gov. Joseph E. Willard, candidate for the democratic nomination for the govmorship, delivered a forceful and telling last evening in advocacy of his inthe campaign before a thousand From the time of his arrival in Aln the afternoon he received continual evidences of appreciation and support from the people of this city, and upon his appearance on the platform he was accorded a splendid evation. Capt. Willard's which lasted more than an hour, surpassed the expectations of his friends was his first effort in Alexandria during the present campaign, and he came with-out being heralded as an orator. In fact, his supporters made no claim that he possessed any special ability as a speaker, but before he had been on his feet five minutes was recognized all over the house that he had, in the long and exciting contest in which he has addressed audiences in every section of the state, developed into a speaker of elequence and power. His forceful language. Impressive delivery and frank manner charmed the audience. When the meeting was over it was freely predicted that Capt. Willard would carry Alexandria by a large majority. Before 8 o'clock the crowd began to gather in the opera house. On the street in front of the building the Alexandria brass band, discoursing popular airs, reminded the citizens of the meeting. A delegation of nearly 200 men formed on King street, and headed by the band, marched to the residence of former Mayor George L. Simpson, on North Columbus street, where the lieutenant governor was being entertained. and escorted him to the opera house. Capt. Willard took his seat on the platform in the center of a party composed of the fol-lowing citizens: Messrs. Julian T. Burke, Menry F. Robertson, George L. Simpson, George Uhler, Henderson Carter, William Leadbeater, Frank C. Spinks, jr., M. F. Vincent, William P. Wools, jr., William H. May, Carroll Ashby, John W. May, George Keys, Samuel L. Monroe, Dr. Samuel B. Moore, Thomas A. Fisher, A. D. Brock-

In presenting the lieutenant governor former Mayor Simpson made a brief, but appropriate speech in happy vein. He said was a magnificent and representative audience that had gathered to do honor to the son of Fairfax and the neighbor of the pcople of Alexandria. He paid the highest tribute to the character and ability of Capt, Willard. With him as governor of the state, Mr. Simpson said, the Old Dominion would be sure of a pure and honest administration. He introduced Mr. Williard as "the next governor of Virginia, crea-

Plead Embarrassment.

In opening his speech Mr. Willard said he was peculiarly embarrassed in standing for the first time in the present campaign to plead his cause before an audience of his own neighbors and personal friends. Taking up his record in public life he said he had nothing to hide and nothing to dodge. He denied emphatically that he had opposed or impeded in any way the measure uced in the state legislature for the separation of white and colored passengers on railroad cars in Virginia. What he had done in that connection, he said, was to present and advocate a reasonable amendment to the bill in the interest of small and struggling electric lines. He was equaly positive and direct in reviewing his record on questions affecting labor. In particular he asserted his hearty support of the employers' liability bill as passed by the state legislature. At that juncture he asked why it was that Mr. Swanson, his opponent from the fifth district, had not in his fourteen years of service in Congress framed a law of such a nature for national enforcement. as first drawn was that it was too restricted amended to that effect he had supported it ceive a $250 policy. with all of his power.

Capt. Willard voiced a popular sentiment when he declared that neither the demo-eratic party nor the state owed him any reward in the nature of an obligation for his public services. He said that he, like others, indulged the laudable ambition of being governor, but asserted his willingness to abide cheerfully by the free and untrammeled choice of the people whatever their decision might be. He plead guilty to the charge of not being a Virginian by birth, but that fact he seemed to turn to this own advantage before his audience by saying that he perhaps deserved more credit for being a Virginian than others who became so by accident of birth. He said he had been a citizen of the state by choice for thirty-four years. For being a wealthy man he had no apologies to made. His money, he declared, had been honestly earned and was being properly used. Not a cent of it, he asserted had ever been stained with a widow's tear. As to his use of money in advertising his candidacy for the governorship he said he was glad that he had adequate means for that purpose.

The Mackey Attack.

In reference to the letter written by Mr. Crandal Mackey of Alexandria county and published in the Roanoke Times, attacking Representative Swanson, Mr. Willard declared that he had had absolutely nothing to do either with the writing or the publishing of the article. He said his consent had not been asked or obtained and that he knew nothing of it until the communi-cation appeared. He denied that he had paid either to have it printed or dissemi-nated among the voters of the state. As to the merits of the article or his apinion of it, Capt. Willard made not the slightest reference. He did say, however, that he himself had been viciously attacked by paid political publications, and asked who had put up the money for those purposes. One of his enemies, he said, whose name he did not mention, had gone so far as to have an article printed in a northern paper under the heading, "Rumseller Willard." Capt. Willard devoted a considerable part of his speech to a discussion of the needs of the state. Passing from an eloquent tribute to the history and traditions of Virginia, including warm praise for the con-federate soldier, he asserted that the commonwealth should take up the march of progress with a renewal of energy and enterprise which would place her in the fore-front of the states of the nation. To this end he believed in more liberal laws, to attach capital to the state and in a great capital to the state and in a grea tract capital to the state, and in a great improvement in the educational system. Longer school terms, better school houses and more adequately paid teachers, he said, '-Advertise

ALEXANDRIA AFFAIRS were essential to the life of the state. He reiterated his advocacy of the single text book list, as stated in his letter of announcement.

He thought a wonderful improvement in the public thoroughfares of the state could be stated to the state of the state could be stated to the state of the state of the state could be stated to the state of the st be brought about by the employment of con-vict labor on the reads. In his opinion this plan would be far better both to the con-victs and the state than the present system of hiring the priscners to private manufac-turing concerns in Richmond, where they came into competition with labor in the

Capt. Willard devoted the latter part of his speech to a discussion of the Mann law. Reasserting for himself that he had never evaded an issue, he said that Mr. Swanson had declined to put himself on record in so far as the Mann bill was concerned. He said that he discussed the matter there because all thinking men had conceded that the fight was between himself and Judge Mann. He announced his hearty support of the law with an amendment to make its provisions within the present scope of the statute uniform instead of arbitrary. He asserted that he was as good a temperance man as anybody else but that he was not a prohibitionist. The meeting closed amid great enthusiasm shortly before 10 o'clock. The large attendance was particularly gratifying to the committee, in view of the fact that nearly 200 Alexandria voters were out of the city with local organizations. But their absence was partly made up by delegations of citizens from Fairfax and Alexandria

General Matters.

Eugene Parker, colored, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of assaulting John Dogan, also colored, with a shotgun, was given a hearing this morning before Justice Caton in the police court. The evidence showed that Parker and Dogan had had a wordy war, and that the former had procured a gun with which he fired upon the latter at a distance over which the small shot was not particularly effective. Dogan's injuries were not serious. Parker was fined $50 in default of which amount he will spend ninety days in the city jail.

The old Braddock House on North Fairfax street, which has been the subject of complaints alleging it to be a menace to its occupants and the health of the community, was inspected yesterday by a committee composed of Mayor Paff, City Engineer Dunn, Health Officer Gorman, Acting Chief Summers of the fire department and Chief Webster of the police force. The officials who accompanied the mayor will, at his request, make a written report to him of their separate findings.

It is stated that a much-needed examination as to the safety of the cages in the anthracite mines has begun by order of Chief Inspector James Roderick of the bureau of mines. The order was that "a thorough test be made immediately of every mine cage in the anthracite region to as-certain whether the safety appliances are certain whether the safety appliances are in working order."

It is possible that the test will prove expensive for the operators in case the safety appliances are defective, for the test is made by detaching the cage from its cable and allowing it to fall. If the appliances are in proper order, of course, the cage will be checked and stopped, but if they are not to be checked and stopped, but if they are not to be caped as a constant of the cape will be checked and stopped, but if they are not to be caped as a constant of the caped and the caped and the ends; ready to use; soft finish absorbent sort.
